UPL User Guide

The purpose of this site is to provide a simple & user-friendly interface for uploading files to http://eag-web-01.iso.port.ac.uk/upl.
In order to use it, a user must be signed-up.

1. Signup form
Password: 4-32 characters.
Username: 4-25 characters.

2. Frontend validation is helpful enough to prevent someone from entering incorrect info. In the event of password mismatch & same username entered, though, the form will reload with a related message and all the input erased (that couldn't be avoided, sorry)
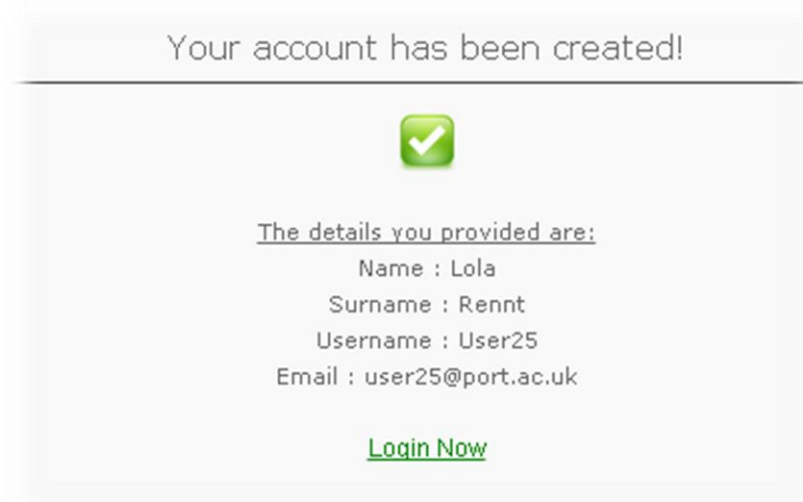

3. On successful completion, this page simply shows a confirmation message with the details submitted (except for the password, which is encrypted), and a link to the login page.
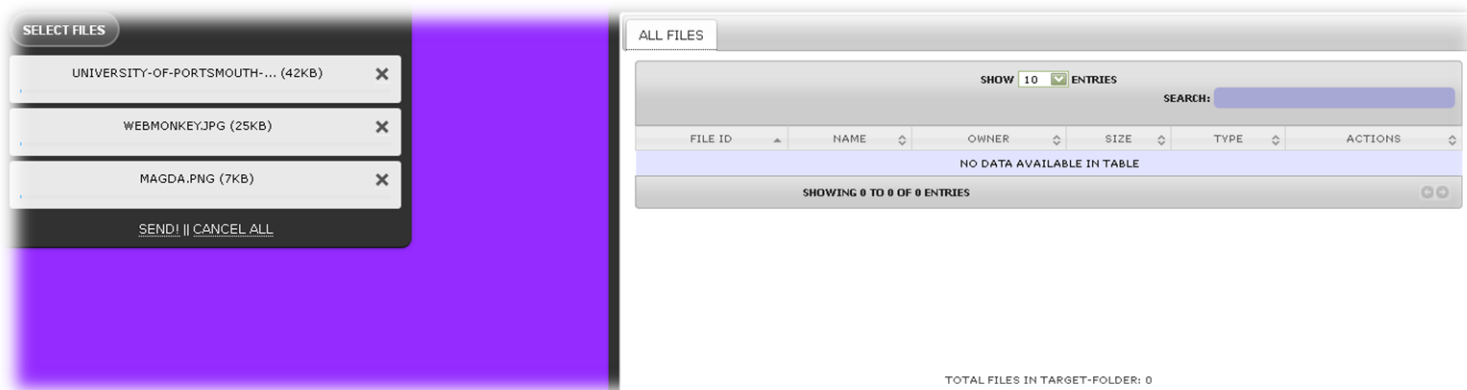

4.   If you sent wrong info, the form simply reloads.
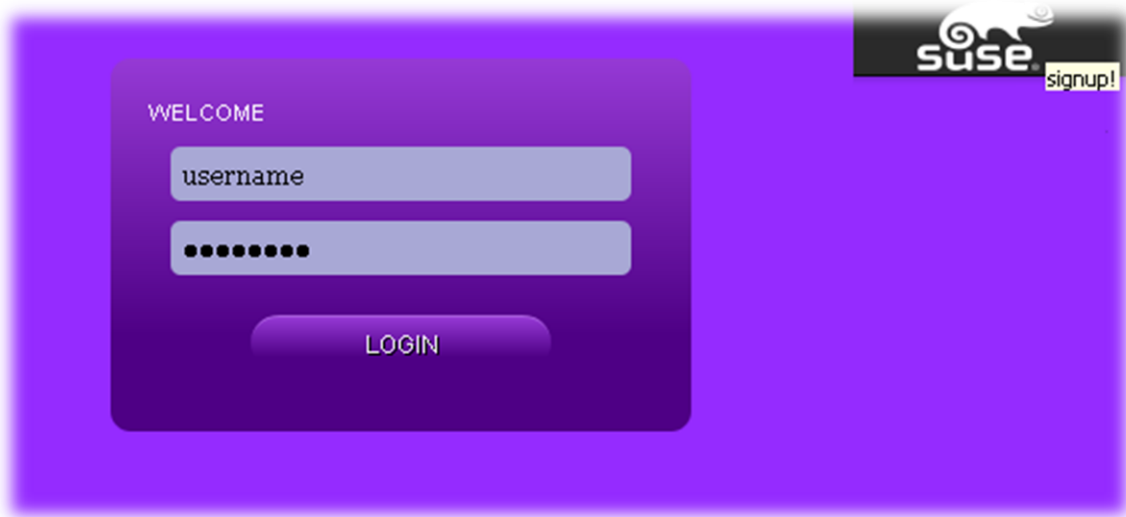

5. The main page is the box on the left and a datatable on the right. On successful upload, the details of the file are stored in a table, along with the owner's username.

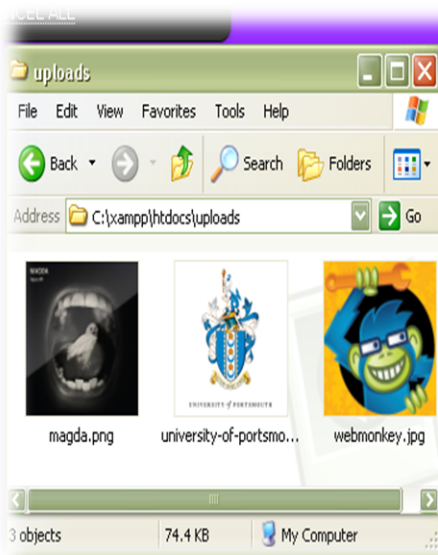

On successful upload, the three files above were added to the destination folder, and to the database. (from the user 'puppy123'). Here you can select to either download or delete something.

Note: In case files are moved across folders, then the records in the database will just remain and in that case, if you press an action, only the record will be deleted, and you will be directed to a blank page. Because it will not find the relevant file anymore. There is not backend capture of this error so there will be no relevant error message. Press 'back'.

The counter at the bottom, although not very helpful, shows the total in the specified directory.

(Also, there is no automatic update for the table rows if you delete or add something. It should be but I couldn't figure out the problem. So in this case, you'll need to refresh the page.)

6. The purpose of the table here is to combine sorting, info, filtering, and actions.
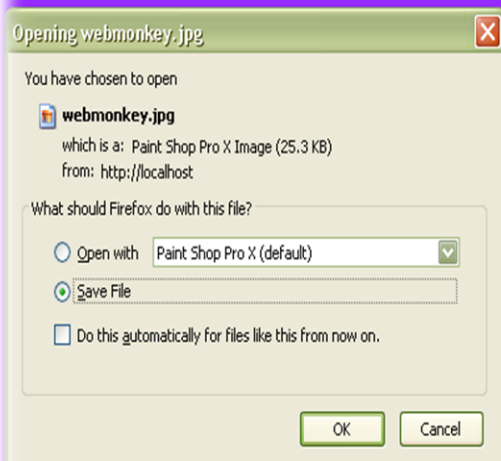

There is also a queue limit. Here is 20.*
